Our community members actively involved in monitoring the health and protection of mountain gorillas. Our conservation efforts are crucial for the well-being of endangered species like mountain gorillas. Some of the strategies and activities that our communities and conservation organizations typically adopt to protect and monitor the health of mountain gorillas are regular field surveys and patrols are conducted to monitor the gorilla population and researchers study their behavior, social structure, and health to better understand their needs and threats. Local community do implement anti-poaching measures to prevent illegal hunting of gorillas and training the locals to assist park rangers to patrol and protect gorilla habitats.

We collaborate with local communities to promote sustainable land use practices, involving local communities in conservation efforts to build a sense of ownership and responsibility.
