At Red rocks, we engage in global advocacy, urging the tourism industry towards increased environmental, social and cultural responsibility, and sustainability, and to leave positive footprints at volcanoes national park in people's minds.

Red rocks Housing,

This is a project where our guests get involved, like helping Single Parents, in a Housing project. We believe it would be a great interaction between tourist and the community, we get the land or ask it from the Town council then a group or some people can come in and construct the house for them with the help of the other locals, in this case, we want to promote unity and togetherness in the community and also in our visitors. This way one doesn't only visit the gorillas but also makes a difference in the community. Their names are remembered because they are actually signed on the house, for example, Red rocks Housing project/ Supported by Luke, or any other name one would like to use. The community asks for that. 50 families have benefitted from these project since it's implementation pre-covid-19 situation, many tourists who visited us contributed to make the project a success

2. Public Health initiative,

Responding to local needs, We construct Pit Latrines for some families that don't have one within the area, as a part of Health and Sanitation within the village nearby, as we extend to other parts of the country, more than 100 families have been constructed pit latrines from well-wishers who visited the areas where we operate in Nyakinama, Kinigi, Bulera, Kabaya and kayonza . This way any of the guests leave a positive footprint to the locals helping us keep our society clean, and the people healthy.

3- Conservation through tree planting,

Our main achievements are closely connected to tree growing and reforestation, the introduction of the use of renewable and energy-saving programs. We encourage the planting of trees around the area in order to the community about conservation this way the community can set up some seedbed when your groups come, would be able to support them by buying those trees and get to plant them along the road, or nearby the school, clinic compounds. We involved all our community members at all the centers we got in Rwanda to plant trees and learn more about how to conserve them and maintain them for combating the effects of climate change, 300 families around all the centers have planted trees around their homestead and during the monthly Umuganda(Community social work) we emphasized them to plant trees near rives , mountainous areas and alongside the roadside.

4-School project,

We involve our clients; here those that want to buy paint, and paint classrooms in a school from the village, Buy stationery for the students, uniforms, and shoes. Or even spend a day with them and teach them something. Our main objective is for each one of us to leave positive footprints. More than 100 families have been impacted, their children learn from the schools which have been supported by our volunteers and well wishers.

5. While in Harvesting we do this under our initiative of Agro tourism, and get clients to go and work on the farm with each family, we can allocate 2 people in each family per day to go and work with them in their farms, and get to know one other. 200 families have once met tourists who teach them on modern ways of farming, how to control soil erosion and also they have been taught on how to use fertilizers suitable for their soils and also been taught on which plants to grow in certain areas.

Red rocks have more than volunteering, but sharing your talent, bring it forward, or pay it while volunteering with our community members, a memorable and unforgettable experience, just contact us with your talent and will handle it accordingly. We welcome everyone and anything that everyone can offer. Global citizenship is our goal, we do this by combining development by our initiatives which are supported through Red rocks, we showcase the positive effects of responsible tourism, and best practices at our village in Nyakinama and Kinigi. 200 families have benefitted from services or talents they learnt from volunteers who have worked with us.
