We do focus on efforts to effectively involve community engagement, improving good governance, and inclusivity in decision-making, as well as revenue and benefits sharing thus reducing the chances of conflict of interest. We have partnered with local and national organizations to provide technical support to encourage and enable, improved accountability our local members, increase capacity for community-based planning and monitoring. Improve access and more equitable and transparent use Gaining support for conservation is not simply a question of ensuring that local communities derive financial benefit from conservation activities. It also involves forging and strengthening links with local populations through broader initiatives that address issues such as public health, environmental education, and human-wildlife conflict resolution
